Note from Mrs. Saladin

Dear St. Charles school families,

This week has been a good reminder of how much our St. Charles community cares for one another. I've seen a lot of kindness this week, and I'm thankful for it. Sometimes there really aren't words for everything, and just being there for each other is enough.

We're far enough into the school year now that the "newness" has worn off a little. The kids are settling in, expectations are getting higher, and we're asking them to work hard, be kind, and make good choices. They won't always get it right, and that's okay. Part of our job is helping them learn from those moments and try again the next day.

Thank you for working alongside us. Raising good kids takes all of us, and I'm grateful we get to do it together.

Take good care of each other this weekend.

Peace,
Mrs. Saladin
